RSPH UPDATES:
Quantitative Essentials for Public Health
Once again, our incoming cohort will have access to the Quantitative Essentials for Public Health course site. This optional resource was designed to review quantitative knowledge and provide a refresher. The course is available for all RSPH students. Still, it is especially recommended for those students whose undergraduate education did not have a quantitative emphasis or those who have been out of school for several years in non-quantitative positions and need a refresher.
This course consists of three modules that cover the Quantitative Essentials of Public Health:
- Module 1: Fractions, Decimals, and Percentages
- Module 2: Algebra
- Module 3: Essential Functions and Notation
Incoming students will have Canvas access in mid-July. Faculty who want to be added to this course site should send an email to rsphenrollmentservices@emory.edu.

Writing Resources
The RSPH Academic Resource Center (ARC) recently partnered with the Emory Writing Center to provide writing support for RSPH MPH/MSPH students. This partnership will go into effect beginning September 1, 2024. This means that ARC will no longer be offering writing services and will be referring our students to the writing center for support once the Summer semester closes. If you receive questions from students regarding writing assistance, please direct them to the Emory Writing Center to schedule an appointment. DID YOU KNOW? The Writing Center also offers resources for faculty such as class visits, faculty support, etc.
